

Prato CIRN Community Informatics Conference 2012

Date: Tuesday, 06/Nov/2012

9:00am - 12:30pm	wkshpA: Workshop A Location: Sala Veneziana Information Management Framework Toolkit –1/2 day workshop, 9-12.30pm 6 November 2012 Andrew Clark and others This one-day workshop will introduce participants to the Information Management Framework (IMF) Toolkit. The IMF toolkit has been specifically designed for small Non Government Organisations (NGOs) to effectively manage their information. This toolkit and associated resources is one of few resources of this type in the world for small NGOs (Up to 50 staff). The workshop will be lead by Andrew Clark and others. Participants will be limited to 15 people and there will be a modest charge to cover costs. A Certificate will be issued. For more information, refer to the the workshop page
2:00pm - 5:30pm	wkshp B: Information and Memory Infrastructure Development Location: Sala Veneziana Recordkeeping and archiving are fundamental infrastructural components supporting community information, self-knowledge and memory needs, thus contributing to resilient communities and cultures and pan- or trans-community endeavors. Facilitators: Anne Gilliland and Michael Wartenbe, UCLA, Sue McKemmish, Monash University Australia, Kelly Besser, UCLA Library With a particular focus on Indigenous, LGBTI, im/migrant and refugee communities, this workshop will address how decolonized and community-centric recordkeeping and archival research, education and practice might empower communities in support of such desirable objectives as democracy, human and civil rights, self-determination, sustainable development, and social inclusion.

11:30am - 1:00pm	confwkshop: Workshop Location: Entrance: up the stairs A growing body of research in community informatics looks at how ICTs can support the expression, knowledge production and communication practices of minority cultures, in particular indigenous communities. Some studies reckon that the employ of ICTs in minority contexts presents some inherent challenges, even foundational contradictions. This workshop will explore some of these challenges, drawing on the experience of three researchers and practitioners that have worked with minorities in Australia, Europe, and New Zealand. We will discuss the benefits that minority communities are likely to reap from technology interventions, the role played by community responsible involvement and the conditions for autonomous management, and the factors to consider when deciding over the standards and languages for capturing, classifying, and communicating local content. Presentations Workshop /Plenary proposals Digital Platforms for Minority Voices Paolo Paolini, Amalia Georgiana Sabiescu Università della Svizzera italiana, Switzerland
